

Edgehill University: Creating a unique selling point

Edge Hill
University

A letter from a trainee...

“I’d like to tell you about the impact that the financial education work has had on me now that I am a fully qualified teacher...

It began when I attended a lecture at Edgehill University on the importance of financial education in the primary curriculum. This lecture inspired me and made me realise how essential it was to a child’s education. It gave me the knowledge, confidence and enthusiasm to include it in my final block teaching practice with a class of 5-year-olds. I was delighted with the outcomes

This success gave me the confidence to deliver financial education in the special school where I am a fully qualified teacher. I have delivered inset to all staff members and continue to support them in this aspect of the curriculum. Recently I returned to my university to deliver a workshop to trainee teachers and have delivered a workshop at a pfeg national conference.

Edgehill University: Creating a unique selling point

The training and support I have had has proved invaluable to my pupils and teaching colleagues and has already had a huge impact on my professional development and career opportunities.

Best wishes,

Gemma Ryan (class of 2012)

St Thomas's Primary School Ashton in Makerfield.