

Exeter University: Raising awareness of financial education with students

Exeter University Graduate School of Education wanted to bring financial education to the attention of all trainees. The aim was to achieve a greater awareness of financial education for the:

- ✓ 200 ITT trainees enrolled on the Primary PGCE courses
- ✓ team of lecturers delivering primary PGCE courses
- ✓ school based mentors, visiting tutors and other partners of the Graduate School of Education whom frequent the campus

The main reception foyer was used for an engaging and motivating display on teaching about money in the primary classroom:

Impact

The display was designed to communicate clear messages about the importance of financial education for children and that teaching about money needs to start at a young age. It exemplified a range of primary financial education resources and ideas for classroom practice including various resources which could be taken away by visitors:

- ✓ copies of pfeg's Learning About Money in the Primary Classroom
- ✓ copies of the Primary Planning Framework
- ✓ registration form to sign up for pfeg updates
- ✓ copies of CDs, DVDs and other pfeg resources

Feedback from tutors, trainees and teachers was impressive and extremely positive.

The Faculty Administrator received support and training relating to the ongoing maintenance of the display including ordering and replenishing materials and resources as necessary.
